This video captures a powerful and tender moment with Ziad, a young Palestinian refugee in Arish, during a sports day for children. While Evon was sharing the parable of the Lost Sheep, Ziad listened intently, it was the very first time he had ever heard it, since this was also his first encounter with Christians.

In the video, he honestly admits that all he ever knew was that there are Muslims and Jews; he had never even heard about Christians before. What made the moment especially moving was that Ziad sounded extremely interested, and that was something odd to him to be done by the shepherd, whom Evon illustrated later as he represents God.
